POET RILEY'S FIRST LECTURE.

Compelled to Print His Own Posters and to Admit the Audience Free.

"James Whitcomb Riley never will forget his first experience as a platform lecturer," remarked an old floosier at the Grand Pacific the other day. "It was a good many years ago. Jimmy was eking out an existence as a painter at that time, and when times were dull and he was out of a job he spent his leisure moments in stringing together verses. Some of these were so good, in his own estimation at least, that he sometimes recited them at little gatherings about the neighborhood.

"But, unknown even to his friends, the embryo poet had rather lofty aspirations and burned to launch out as a public entertainer. So he began quietly casting for an eligible opportunity to 'try it on the floor.'

"He was poor then—poor is no name for it. In fact, he was generally in debt, and though he worked hard never seemed to have any money or a fair prospect of getting any. It will readily be seen that it was not an easy matter for Riley to realize his hopes under such circumstances. At last, however, he raised a little money on a job of painting and with it invaded a neighboring hamlet, where his fame had not preceded him.

"After considerable red tape he secured the privilege of using the school house for his entertainment. In fact, the school house was the only available place in the village for such a gathering. Then he hung up a lot of posters announcing that James Whitcomb Riley, the Hoosier poet, would give one of his unique and inimitable entertainments at the Hamtown school house on the following Saturday night. These posters were blank paper, decorated with charcoal instead of printers' ink, and Riley spent one whole day in printing them.

"At the last moment, however, a perfect deluge of cold water was thrown over the young poet's aspirations by an unexpected announcement from the Hamtown school board. On the afternoon of the eventful day the president of the board waited on Riley, who was nervously pacing his room at the little excuse for a hotel, and informed him that by an agreement entered into when the school building was erected no entertainments were to be given in it unless they were of a public character.

"But mine is to be a public entertainment," insisted Mr. Riley.

"Oh, no, it isn't," asserted the town dignitary. "You are going to charge an admission fee. That doesn't look like a public affair—does it?"

"It isn't a free entertainment, $5 be sure; but it is certainly to be public," maintained the poet.

"Not as we understand the term," said the official. "In short, the only way you can go on with the show is to throw the doors open."

"Here was a pretty state of affairs, but the question must be settled at once, and Riley promptly accepted the horn of the dilemma nearest him, and said that the entertainment should be given at all hazards and that no admission fee would be charged."—Chicago Mail.

The Monkey Puzzle Tree.

At a meeting of the Royal Botanic society Dr. R. C. A. Prior presented ripe seeds of Arancaria imbricata, the monkey puzzle tree of Chili, collected from a large tree growing in the open air at Corsham, Wilts. He mentioned that in England the plant, though common, seldom ripens its seeds. It was first introduced here 100 years ago by Mr. Menzies, a Scotch botanist, who accompanied Vancouver's expedition in search of a passage between the Atlantic and Pacific oceans. In returning from their attempt they put in at Valparaiso and were hospitably entertained by the viceroy of Chili.

While dessert was on the table Menzies observed some nuts he had not seen before. Instead of eating his share he saved them, and taking a box of soil back with him on board ship succeeded in raising five plants, which he brought to England, and the formed a stock from which most of the large trees now growing in various parts of England have originated.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Plenty of Water Necessary to Health.

As the waste in animal food in those who lead indolent lives is carried off by the kidneys, it is very desirable that they should be kept well flushed with plenty of water, for pure water is to the kidneys what fresh air is to the lungs, and taken in the early morning, preferably as hot as it can be sipped, it washes away the unhealthy secretions that have accumulated in the stomach during the night, and stimulates it to healthy action, and then, passing on through the system till it reaches the kidneys, carries away by their aid the uric acid, gout poison and other impurities that should have no fixed habitation in the body at all, and would not have if the sufferer were properly dieted for even two or three weeks each year.—Gentleman's Magazine.

Modern Miracles.
A singer for breath was distressed, And the doctors all said she must rest; But she took G. M. D. For her weak lungs, you see, And now she can sing with the best.

An athlete gave out on a run. And he feared his career was quite done; G. M. D. Pray observe, Gave back his lost nerve, And now he can lift half a ton.

A writer who wrote for a prize, Had headaches and pain in the eyes; G. M. D. was the spell, That made him quite well, And glory before him now lies.

A Game of Charities is Having Success in a Swindling Game in the Interior towns of West Virginia.

A well-dressed man puts in an appearance at a country store, and informs the proprietor that he is searching for rare coins, giving a list of specimens and their alleged value. He asks the storekeeper to keep a sharp lookout, and in case he gets any of the coins mentioned in the alleged list to keep them until he returns, which he says will be in a short time. Soon another stranger casually drops in and buys some little article, and in making change exhibits several coins which, he says, are pocket pieces.

The proprietor consults his list and finds the value of the alleged pocket pieces put down at forty or fifty dollars each. Anxious to make a good thing the proprietor nearly always pays a good big price for the pieces. He then waits for the man who made the tempting offers, but he never turns up.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Terrors of Letter Writing.

A new terror has been added to letter writing so awful in its possibilities as to make cautious souls tremble at the sight of a pen. It's bad enough to suspect that your best friend will confide your notes to reporters or sell them to autograph collectors, but now that chemistry steps in to absolutely change their complexion, what method of communicating thought is left save the telephone?

Judge Farman, of Denver, says that by the use of certain chemicals it is possible to remove the words of a letter and substitute others without detection—even under a microscope. Experts in recent "boodle cases" in Colorado testified to this fact, one of whom actually made the experiment before Judge Farman's very eyes.

Here's a pretty state of things! Must we, for fear of being convicted of murder, arson or some other crime foreign to our natures, refrain from writing at all together, or can we keep out of prison by making careful copies of every form of letter even to dinner acceptances and regrets? Behold a new social problem.—Kate Field's Washington.

A New Fire Extinguisher.

A new material, which has been introduced in England under the name of "vulnite," has given some remarkable results as a fire extinguisher. For this purpose, although it is a liquid, it is much more effective than water, inasmuch as it freezes only at a very low temperature and exercises no injurious effects on fabrics or timber. A large fire made with highly inflammable materials was extinguished almost immediately by a small charge of the preparation. It is also likely to come into use as a protector for the skin of those who are exposed to intense heat. A very convincing feature of the merits of vulnite is that after it has been applied material that was previously combustible will not ignite.—Lancashire Courier Journal.

First Identified by His Dog.

Harry Ainsworth, a sporting man, was killed at Stockton by the engine of the local train from San Francisco. The body was found ten minutes after the train passed. The head of the remains lay near the end of the railroad track. His dog, a setter, was let into the morgue and after running about the box a few times, the animal jumped up and caught hold of the lapel of the coat on the deceased, as if trying to pull him out of the box. It was this recognition that convinced the people who were there that the deceased was Harry Ainsworth. Later the body was positively identified.—Cor. San Francisco Chronicle.

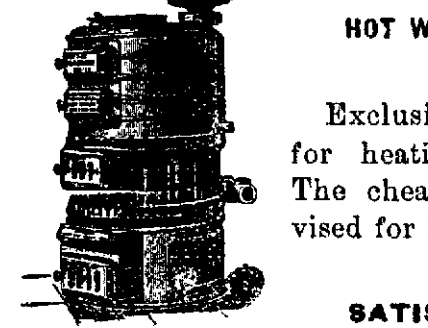

Belgium Anxious to Come to Chicago.

The corporation of rifle manufacturers at Liege, Belgium has addressed a petition to the government asking for a subsidy to enable it to make a worthy exhibit of its branch of industry at the Chicago exposition. At Liege about 40,000 persons are employed in the manufacture of arms, but during recent years it is said that the productions of Liege have diminished in prestige. The manufacturers are now trying to re-establish their arms in favor, and to this end want to make a fine exhibit at Chicago.—Paris Letter.

Who are the eight most prominent Americans? That question, recently propounded by the Atlanta Constitution, brought forth a variety of answers. In 20 answers it is remarkable that but one man's name is mentioned, and that is James G. Blaine. The following is a fair average of the names: James G. Blaine, Grover Cleveland, Jay Gould, Benjamin Harrison, John J. Ingalls, John L. Sullivan, Dewitt Tammage and Jerry Simpson.
Who Shall Teach Our Children.
EDITOR STATE JOURNAL.—A few recent paragraphs in your enterprising daily assure me that your "heart is in the right place," and that we are in harmony on the question of employing our home teachers in our public schools. This is my excuse for troubling you with this effusion. In a short time the annual election of teachers for the ensuing year will be held, and I want to record my protest against the employment of teachers from without the State, to the exclusion of our home supply. It is and has been advanced that "our own standard is too low," that we have no available teachers competent to teach the higher grades in our public schools. This, Mr. Editor, is an erroneous as the action that gives rise to these thoughts: I know that twenty teachers could have been found in our own State competent to fill a recent vacancy in our public school, and I regret exceedingly that my co-trustees did not second me in the matter.
Our Normal school is graduating a class of students yearly for the profession of pedagogy, whose only disparity is inexperience, which is lessened daily. Why not take those by the hand and complete the work so well begun? The State created that institution for this express purpose; appointed competent professors to carry out the end in view; then why insult our own people, the professors and the graduates themselves by ignoring them? Mr. Editor, the policy is false; the action constitutes a wrong to all and tends to self-deterioration. Respectfully yours,
WILLIAM PINNIGER.

LETTERS FROM THE OLD WORLD.

An American's Observations in the Holy Land.
We left Jerusalem March 18th, came to Jaffa that evening, next day took steamer for Beyrout, and arrived there the same day. The next day we took diligence for Baalbec and Damascus, launched at Stora and took carriage for Baalbec; arrived in the afternoon, cold and shivering.
The Lebanon mountains were covered with snow, and we passed through a snow fall on the middle summit. There was no fire or fireplace at the hotel, and we rebelled; finally a large brazier with live coals was rigged up, and we warmed our cold feet and chilled bodies.
THE RUINS OF BAALBEC.
The next morning we were out early to see the greatest wonder of the world, the ruins of the Temple of the Sun and the Temple of Jupiter at Baalbec, compared with which the Colosseum of Rome, the great pyramid and ruins at Luxor and Karnak sink into dwarfs.
When I first stood in the center of the great court and saw the broken walls, the fallen pillars, the stupendous masses of wreck and ruin on every side, I was so overcome with wonder and awe that it was difficult for a time to even think correctly. Even after my emotions had toned down and I had gone away and come back again, I had no words to express intelligently the true greatness and grandeur of the ruins. All modern mechanical skill and engineering is dumb when looking upon what has been accomplished here, and some of the most massive and stupendous work has been done by a lost race. It is interesting to watch the impressions made on different persons when first seeing the ruins. Some are struck by and never comprehend anything but the beautiful carving and artistic and elaborate designs over and around the great arches and doorways; some never see anything but evidence of Greek or Phœnician or other origin; many come and walk around the wall and cannot see the three great stones in the west wall that baffle all modern science and engineering 131x162 feet, and from 30 to 50 feet above the foundation. One wise American from New York saw some Roman lettering on a broken doorway and thereupon declared the thing was Roman. I tried to see all, but was most impressed with what the temples were in their day of greatest splendor and beauty. If so overwhelming in their ruin, what were they in their prime? There is a small portion of the original walls still unbroken, showing that they must have been at least 125 feet high, and 6 feet thick on top. One portion of the oldest foundation has not been hidden by the fallen wall, and shows that it was built by a race long since gone, with engineering thoughts different from any subsequent age—a race equal to but different from the people who out and moved the monster stones, after whom came the Phœnicians and Greeks, then the Persians, last the Romans; each in turn added to and built wider and higher.
The utterance passage and arched chambers of the first builders are so massive that the earthquake of 1759, which weakened the wall, could not even fracture them. Of all the historians and tourists who have written of these ruins, none have told the half that can be seen by an intelligent eye.
DAMASCUS.
From Baalbec we returned to Stora, took lunch, changed diligences and arrived in Damascus that evening cold and tired. There was no snow on the Anti-Lebanon range, through which we had to pass.
We stopped at Damascus, which is a failure so far as anything sensational is concerned. The beauty of its situation and surroundings is the chief attraction. We need not wonder that it is the oldest city in the world, for there is no better or nicer place in the world to build one. It is in a rich and beautiful valley with three never failing rivers of pure water, in a healthy, temperate climate, protected by mountains from storms. Connect it by rail with Beyrout and it would become a center of world-wide attraction. We rode far out into the valley, saw the place where Paul was smitten, drove around the old wall and saw the spot where Paul was laid down in a basket, near the Jerusalem gate, walked many hours through the long lines shops, bazars, market streets, saw the weavers of silk and purple, the shops of dyers, saddlers, shoemakers, smiths carpenters and goldsmiths, walked the length of the street that is called Straight, saw the humpback called the house of Ananias, the leper and finished with the live stock market, in which were horses, camels, donkeys, cattle, sheep, goats, and all kinds of feathered fowl.
IN THE SNOW BELT.
We left Damascus at 4:30 A. M. and were driven seventy-two miles in fourteen hours, crossing both ranges of mountains, Lebanon had two feet of snow on top, and there were hundreds of men there shoveling snow into baskets and carrying them on their heads to large flat-topped houses, where the snow was packed for summer use. There were long lines of loaded camels and many freight wagons that almost obstructed the road at times. It took three hours to pass the snow belt, then we came down into bright sunshine, green fields, orchards and gardens and arrived in Beyrout near night fall, fully ready for a hot supper and a night's rest.
A MISSION IN THE MOUNTAINS.
The next day we took carriage from Beyrout up to this place, 2,500 feet above the sea, and at the end of three hours reached the door of the mission house, where we were kindly greeted by the friends in charge. A warm lunch was served and we were introduced to the teachers and members of the mission, and as is my fate, I had to tell the boys about America and talk in general. We were assigned to a small, quiet hotel near by, where we could really rest, for I began to feel like exclaiming, "Oh, for one day's rest from the constant whirl of ceaseless changes," and we have found it.
This mission was a surprise; we were not prepared to see such evidences of permanence and prosperity with such devoted workers in charge.

The buildings are all of stone, large and well arranged, and others are going up; the grounds are being improved and beautified; the barren sides of the mountain have been sown in nut pine, which is doing well. From the spirit and example of the mission the villagers are sowing the mountains in pine for miles around, and the barren surfaces will soon be a vast pine forest, resulting from the inspiration of Eli Jones, who selected this place and located the mission.
A GRAND SCENE AND PRIMITIVE PEOPLE.
There is not a grander scene in Western Asia, if anywhere else, than surrounds Brumana; from south, west around east and north there is a grand panorama of mountain tops, toned down with a soft blue haze. To the west the blue waters of the Mediterranean glitter in the bright sunlight, while seemingly Beyrout and its harbor is right under us, always in view. Turn where we will, there is an interesting, pleasing view.
By the labor of centuries, many of the mountains are terraced to their summits and planted in mulberry, figs, vines and other fruits. With a glass we can see everywhere; miles away the hardy mountaineers at work among their trees and in their gardens. They all live in stone houses in small, closely built villages near a fountain, and use the same tools, follow the same customs of 4,000 years ago. We have spent many hours walking out among the villages, taking lessons and learning every day life among this people. I rendered myself popular rather unexpectedly one day when out. We were passing a smith shop where a man and a boy were forging out a pick. When the next heat was ready I took the sledge and struck through without missing. Of course my strokes were very different from the boy's and attracted the villagers, who were astonished to see the old American wielding a sledge just like other folks.
Again, a stone quarry was very lazily picking on a large square stone. I took his pick—shaped like a mill pick—and dressed a foot square in a few minutes as skillfully as he was doing. This soon gathered a noisy, jabbering crowd around me. I could not understand a word they said, but all seemed well pleased with the "old American." In this way I have worked into the good graces of the rude people and would not fear to travel alone among them for many miles around.
THE PATH OF CONQUERORS.
The hardest day's work we have done since leaving home was done March 29th. We started early, with a young native doctor as guide, to visit the Gate of the Kings, a narrow pass between the mountains and sea at the north end of the bay, through which all the conquerors of the past had to pass, and who engraved on the cliffs the date, aim and end of their expeditions. The oldest tablets belong to the race that founded Baalbec, then comes Egyptian, Assyrian, Persian, Phœnician, Greek and Roman, the latter by Antonius Pius.
Our path led down, down among villages, orchards, vineyards, rocks, ravines and cliffs, three hours of hard walking, until we reached the pike at a carriage station and drove two hours to the pass, situated at the mouth of Dog river, a wild, rugged, romantic spot. We took lunch and spent an hour looking at the old inscriptions and highway, then drove back to a point near Brumana, took another walk up, for three more hours, arriving at sunset, tired but not much the worse for the day's work. We had seen more of the every day life of the people than at any time before, saw new evidence of the long centuries that had elapsed since man had begun his work here.
We shall long remember the kind people here and can recommend this as a resting place for all Americans that come this way.
TURNED WESTWARD.
Our programme is the same as last report, except that we may be sailing from port to port for five days before reaching Athens. From Athens we go to Constantinople, or Cospoli, as the Turks call it; from there to London about the middle of May, where we hope letters await us.
My health seems to improve all the time, though my head pains me occasionally. "J—L—" says I work too hard and write too much. We are now in the most expensive part of our journey, and have learned much about travel. I could take parties over our route at considerably less than it has cost us, and may live to do it.
We do not lumber ourselves with baggage; have small grip socks that we carry in one hand. This makes us independent of porters, cabmen, dragmen and all such. When our clothes wear out we will shed them off and buy more. We meet Americans and English at every point, have no trouble for lack of language; sometimes ignorance is an advantage.

Hope to hear from you when I reach London. Your affectionate father,
A. COFFIN.
HARRISON AND CLEVELAND.
The Opinion of a Western Man Just from the East
Through an interview with a prominent Californian who passed west last evening and who has been east some time a JOURNAL reporter was informed that it is practically conceded that Harrison will be re-nominated at Minneapolis.
"What do you think of Blaine's chances?" inquired the reporter.
"Well, if Blaine were to simply say the word he would receive a unanimous nomination. He is the ideal American around whom all classes rally with unbounded enthusiasm."
"How is the silver question regarded now in the East?"
"The action of the Silver League in the West are a source of much concern to the parties in the East. The united action of the people of the West will be of immense benefit to the silver men."
"Do you think that either party will take up the question and insert a favorable plank in its platform?"
"Well," he answered, "it is rumored that an effort will be made to nominate Blaine on a platform which will declare for the coinage of the American producer."
"Who do you consider will be the probable nominee of the Chicago Convention?"
"Cleveland," he promptly responded. "I do not think that the new York fight will deter the people from demanding his nomination. It will be the old fight of eight years ago, with the chances in favor of Blaine's selectors."

MEMORIAL DAY EXERCISES.
Civil and Military Societies Will Participate.
The Committee appointed to make arrangements for the exercises on Memorial Day under the auspices of Gen. Mitchell Post G. A. R. met last evening and reported progress. It was decided to have the literary exercises at the Opera House. Graves will be decorated at Hillside, Masonic and Odd Fellow's cemeteries. All members of the Committees are requested to meet at the office of Bradshaw & Stewart promptly at 8 o'clock Tuesday evening prepared to report. The I. O. O. F., K. of P., Reno Guards and University Cadets have accepted the invitation to participate.
The World Enriched.
The facilities of the present day for the production of everything that will conduce to the material welfare and comfort of mankind are almost unlimited and when Syrup of Figs was first produced the world was enriched with the only perfect laxative known, as it is the only remedy which is truly pleasing and refreshing to the taste and prompt and effectual to cleanse the system gently in the Spring time or, in fact, at any time and the better it is known the more popular it becomes.
"HER HUSBAND."
A Choice Bit of Literary Work.
The Brooklyn Eagle says: "Her Husband was presented at Hawes' Opera House last evening. The play is a choice bit of literary work, entirely avoiding the realm of sensationalism, but clinging closely to purely social and domestic scenes. The scenes in the play appealing to a keen sense of human nature makes the production altogether a purely successful one."
Her Husband will appear at McKissick's Opera House next Wednesday evening. Seats can now be reserved at Pinniger's drug store.
An Injunction.
There are two kinds the courts tell you—a temporary and a permanent injunction. A temporary injunction gives relief for a time only, but when you take Simmons Liver Regulator for Dyspepsia, and find yourself cured, that means a permanent injunction. It's the same when taking the Regulator for Malaria, and all affections of the liver and kidneys.
When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria.
When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria.
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria.
When she had Children, she gave them Castoria.

An Interesting Decision
The last unsettled question of whether or not one fire bootjack at or about the entry of the nocturnal robber—the other man's cat—has been settled against the cat by a jury in the quarter sessions court before Judge Pinniger.

The case was that of Edward N. O'Neill, a dentist, charged with cruelty to animals, in shooting the family cat of his neighbor, Louis B. Fredericks. Mr. Fredericks the prosecutor, alleged that O'Neill wounded the animal and left it to die. On the other hand it was claimed that the cat had annoyed O'Neill by trespassing on his lawn at night where it was wont to move the local air with bursts of song. Instead of the traditional bootjack O'Neill got his gun and killed it outright, the cat surrendering the whole nine ghosts at once. In charging the jury the judge said:

"This bill of indictment charges the defendant with unlawfully and cruelly ill-treating and abusing an animal called a cat. I have only to say, gentlemen, that a citizen has a right to kill an animal of this kind if it trespasses on his premises. Perhaps there is no domestic animal that makes more trouble in the neighborhood than a cat. If this cat was trespassing on this man's place he had a right to kill it, and the only question for you to determine is whether he shot the cat because it was trespassing upon his premises or whether he shot it for the purpose of injuring it. If he shot to kill the cat, and for that reason alone, then you ought to acquit him. If he shot it not for the purpose of ridding himself of what seemed to him a nuisance, then he ought to be convicted. In other words, he has a right to kill a cat for trespassing, but has no right to injure it merely for the purpose of giving it pain or anything of that kind."

The jury rendered a verdict of not guilty.—Philadelphia Record.

Columbus May Have Hummed "Ta-ra-ra."
The words of "Ta-ra-ra Boom-de-ra" were written by Richard Morton, and the music was supplied by Angelo A. Asher. An interview with each of these gentlemen supplied some interesting facts about the production. Mr. Morton is a round faced, clean shaven man, apparently not yet thirty, with black eyes and hair. "How did you write 'Ta-ra-ra Boom-de-ra'?"

"In the first place the music of the song is about 400 years old. It was carried over to America some years ago by some emigrants from the east of Europe. What country can exactly claim it is not known. But it seems to me that Roumania is very likely the birthplace of the air. I have heard several Continental variety turns in London say that it was an old peasant march with which their boyhood was familiar."—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

It Cured the Disease.
The remedies for the grip are almost as numerous as the cases of that dreaded malady. One was tried by William Parrott, of Hillsboro, Ill., at the suggestion of a well meaning friend, between whom and the unfortunate Parrott there is now a chilling coolness. The friend told Parrott that his grip would be driven from his system in ten hours by a warm lye bath. Parrott followed his friend's instructions, and the warm lye caused the patient to shed his skin like a snake, and removed his hair and beard. He is now as bald as a billiard ball, and his entire all over his body is as smooth as that of a freshly skinned cat. But the grip is gone.—Yankee Blade.

Violets Are Profitable.
Violets cut no mean figure in the trade of New York, and in seasons when they escape disease they are highly profitable to the growers. One florist, whose greenhouses are just on the edge of the city, picked from twenty-five to thirty dollars worth of violets weekly all through the winter, although the plants occupied a comparatively small area. The cost of picking is little or nothing, and a skillful picker acquainted with the nature of the plant can cull so that the fertility of the plants shall be vastly increased.—New York Letter.

Bad Weather for Visitors.
The weather in Florida during the past winter has been remarkably bad, and very discouraging to natives and visitors. Those who went there in search of sunny skies and balmy air found little of either, and one newspaper pleads, "Do not allow this exceptional winter to deter you from coming again, never within the memory of living man has there been a winter like this." There has been some delightful weather, but it has been mighty scarce.

Great Record of a Sheep.
R. O. James, of Amity, has a sheep that has a remarkable record in raising a family. Two years ago she gave birth to twin lambs. Last spring she had three more, and one of her lambs a year ago gave birth to twins. This spring she again ushered triplets into the world, and one of her daughters a pair of twins. She is already the maternal ancestor of twelve born in a period of two years.—Portland Oregonian.

State Appropriations for the Fair.
Several additions have recently been made to the appropriations made by the state and territories to the World's Fair which now aggregate $3,180,000. Maryland and New York respectively have voted $60,000 and $300,000. New Jersey has increased its appropriation of $20,000 by $50,000, Iowa, $50,000 by $125,000 and Massachusetts has doubled the $75,000 which it had already appropriated.

A New Set of Teeth at Seventy-four.
David P. Sutherland, of Seymour, is cutting a new set of teeth. He is seventy-four years old and had all of his teeth extracted five years ago. Since that time he has been wearing false teeth. Some days ago the old gentleman's gums became very sore, and to his surprise a tooth broke through. Others quickly followed and a new set is promised.—Indianapolis Journal.

"German Syrup"

A Cough and Croup Medicine.

For children a medicine should be absolutely reliable. A mother must be able to pin her faith to it as to her Bible. It must contain nothing violent, uncertain, or dangerous. It must be standard in material and manufacture. It must be plain and simple to administer; easy and pleasant to take. The child must like it. It must be prompt in action, giving immediate relief, as children's troubles come quick, grow fast, and end fatally or otherwise in a very short time. It must not only relieve quick but bring them around quick, as children chafe and fret and spoil their constitutions under long confinement. It must do its work in moderate doses. A large quantity of medicine in a child is not desirable. It must not interfere with the child's spirits, appetite or general health. These things suit old as well as young folks, and make Boschee's German Syrup the favorite family medicine.

DARKIES HUSTLING.

ONE WAY OF MAKING THE EASY GOING NEGRO STIR HIMSELF.

A Pleasant Industry for the Charleston Colored Folk Originated by New York Tourists—Scrambling for Silver—Diving for Greenbacks.

A steamer was just leaving Charleston, bound for Jacksonville, Fla. A stop of several hours at the famous old earthquake city had made a pleasant break in the three days' run from New York. Many of the passengers had taken advantage of it to drive about the quaint old town, curiously observing the great cracks caused by the upheaval that still remains in many of the buildings. Others took a sail over to Fort Moultrie or to Fort Sumter, where the civil war was started. Perhaps the most interesting point for the sightseers who remained ashore was old St. Michael's church. Some of the more sturdy climbed far up into the steeple, from whence General Beauregard had watched and directed the battle, until the Yankee gunners had got the range of his observatory and put a cannon ball right through the steeple, not far from the general's head, when he discreetly retired.

These passengers were so much impressed with the historical associations connected with the place that it was almost a relief when a half hour's diversion came to them. As the steamer was moving away from her pier an ambitious little tug that puffed and snorted and tooted enough for a couple of ocean liners missed its hold, and the big steamer's bow drifted slowly around until she lay broadside to the outer end of the pier. Here she was held for awhile by a stiff breeze that pinned her up against the pier and by the mud that gripped her keel.

Perhaps it was the cheerful recollection of past experiences which they hoped to have repeated that caused all the darkies, big and little, the six-year-old pickaninny and the gray-headed, stoop-shouldered reminiscence of slavery days to hurry down to the end of this pier. There are few things that will arouse the dusky southerner who makes his home along the river front. He is an easy going, happy natured fellow, fond of a laugh than he is of work, who finds his greatest content in dozing away in some sun sheltered nook upon the wharf, resting to the full from the arduous toil that he fancies he may be called upon to perform in the week to come.

They were of this class who came trooping down to the steamer by the dozen and score. A careful patching into one suit of the attire of half of them would have made a beautiful crazy quilt garb for one. It is doubtful if the most conscientious and painstaking cobbler could have constructed a decent pair of shoes out of the material he found upon that pier.

However, it was a diversion to the passengers on the upper deck to see that motley crowd, and when a dumpy little fellow with a wonderful mouth, that must have created a great vacuum in the atmosphere every time he breathed, pranced to the front and shouted, "Now, ladies and gents, jes' you two a dime at dis yere hole, 'n' if I don't fetch it she don't count," there were instantly three or four times aimed at the "hole." But none of them made a bullseye. I fancy the game must have been played before, for the instant the dimes flashed in the sunlight a half dozen stalwart negroes leaped upon the shoulders of the possessor of the mouth and bore him to the ground.

Then there was a scramble! A Yale-Harvard football scrimmage is supposed to contain as much of writhing, contending, muscular humanity as it is possible to get into a given space. But a Yale-Harvard tangle would be a sort of kindergarten frolic in comparison. That one germant lasted more than ten minutes. During that time the pile of dusky humanity was ten feet high at least, and there were twosome of writhing forms in the heap, all struggling with desperation to get at the unfortunate fellows down below who were supposed to be clutching the dimes. I'll warrant that during that ten minutes there was an individual waste of energy that would have kept the participants in food for a week if otherwise directed.

But that was only the beginning. The sport became as exciting to the watchers as to those who took part. Quarters and half dollars began to shower upon the wharf, which was now thronged with an eager, dark faced multitude, whose eyes glistened. The most sober minded passenger caught the infection and began to feel around in his clothes for silver. A well known Bellevue hospital physician, Dr. J. S. O'Neil, gathered together all the silver dollars that had been given him in change in Charleston, and kept half a dozen heaps of darkies in turmoil at once.

The climax came as the steamer began slowly to move away from the pier. Some one waved a two dollar bill and asked who would dive for it. "I will!" came from two dozen throats, and there was a general peeling of jackets—from those who were dusky enough to wear jackets. The bill fluttered on to the water ten feet from the pier. There was an anxious, hesitating, regretful pause and a scratching of heads. Then there was a plunge, a few sturdy strokes by a young negro, and he clutched the bill. The passengers gave him a cheer and the steamer sailed away.—New York Herald.

The Cow Tree.
The cow tree, the sap of which closely resembles milk, is a native of South and Central America. It is a species of evergreen and grows only in mountain regions. A hole bored into the wood, or even a wound made in the bark of this remarkable tree, is almost immediately filled with a lactical-like fluid, which continues to flow until it coagulates at the mouth of the wound, soon healing the abrasion. This curious fluid is both palatable and nourishing.—Philadelphia Press.
